THIRD CONSECUTIVE VICTORY FOR FROSH

East Stroudsburg Normal Offers Little Opposition in Fast 67-7 Contest.

The Freshman eleven kept up the good work last Friday afternoon and very handily defeated East Stroudsburg Normal Saturday afternoon at 7. From the end of the first quarter, when the yearlings had twenty-five points to their credit, it was simply a question of how many times the first year men would romp through the Red and Black team for another touchdown.

'Pete' Weigel, known to all students at Penn State from 1910 to 1915, who has been a teacher in a mission school in China for several years past, is now in America and proposes to visit the college soon, as the following excerpt from a letter received by Dr. Sparks from Lexington, Virginia, indicates:

'I wanted to visit State and have a chance to see you before coming here. Before leaving China, I went to Canton City with my wife and had a visit with our Penn State men and saw the fine piece of work each man is doing. It was a three day trip from Shanghai and there were many difficulties in my routine work, but I am glad I went and had a chance to see first hand just what this large southern college is doing.'

ANDROLES AND LION STAGED THIS FRIDAY

Players Offer Initial Performance Of Year With Shaw Comedy As Attraction.

Following a postponement of one week the Penn State Players will present their initial performance of the year next Friday night, when they will offer to the student body their production of Bernard Shaw's "Androcles and the Lion." Getting well under way shortly after the commencement of the present college term, the Players have worked hard in preparation for this first appearance, which was originally planned to take place last Friday evening in connection with the Pennsylvania Day festivities.

The cast of "Androcles and the Lion" was selected for the Players' first offering after a careful consideration of many plays that would appeal to Penn State students. It was decided that Shaw's intangible comedy would be the most attractive production. The play is an ultra-modern satirical fable, based on the old fable suggested in the title. It has one of the finest dramatic works in existence today and has been shown with great success in the metropolitan centers of this country as well as abroad.

MUSICAL QUINTET COMING SATURDAY

Merry Rondoliers Will Present Popular Program Saturday—Second Number In Series.

A very popular group of musicians will appear at Penn State Saturday evening, when the "Merry Rondoliers" will give their program at the Schuylk Auditorium under the auspices of the college Y. M. C. The program which they will present to the student body is one that is sure to appeal to everyone, as the music will be of the present day variety in its harmoniousness and its lightness.

AKRON ALUMNI HOLD DINNER

Twenty members of the Alumni Association who live in Akron, Ohio, got together last week, held a meeting, partook of a sumptuous feast, smoked some cigars, listened to tales of "Old State" and once more stocked up with a supply of "Penn State Spirit." The greater part of the evening was consumed in discussing the advisability of raising an Alumni Fund for the College.

COOPERATE WITH STUDENT COUNCIL

For the information of those students who do not realize that there is a student council which regulates student action and decides on all matters of importance to the student body, it is deemed necessary that the students be told of some of the functions of this body, what it has done this year for the students and what the students should do in return. Each class elects an allotted number of men to represent it in the council. It is to duty and privilege of these men to decide on matters of interest to their class and to the college in general. They are responsible for the action of the class and to the college in general. They are responsible for the action of the class as a whole in the council and are delegated there for that purpose. Therefore it is without reason that any class should not abide by the decisions made by its representatives, nor the college as a whole by the council assembled in regular session. However, in spite of these facts, there have been a number of students who have not lived up to the regulations set forth and it is to these men that the COLLEGIAN sends its message, because they lay responsibility on the college as a whole by their actions.

Student Council, believing it was acting for the best interests of the students and the college, made certain petitions to the Council of Administration for vacation and leave of absence periods so that the students might be accommodated at these times. All were granted as requested, save one, and in this case, the change made was slight. However, in the case of the recent week end, those students desiring to attend the Penn game were permitted to leave college at noon on Friday, and providing they did not leave earlier and returned not later than noon last Monday, permission was to be granted for them to make up the work missed. Under no circumstances, however, was a student permitted to leave college. That this ruling was not lived up to is well known. In many cases it was most flagrantly violated. Those men who did act within the limits prescribed are allowed to make up their work and it is not those that we criticize. It is those who left college before the prescribed time and who thus gave up all hope of making up the work they were missing. They stole from themselves in this case what benefit had been granted them.

This case sets forth very plainly that the students do not seem to care whether they obey rules or not. They do not think a single iota of the responsibility they laid in the hands of student council when they brook the rules. Whether the student body knows it or not, the fact is certain that the council is responsible for all the former does and makes its rules accordingly. The council believed that the students would live up to the rules. Instead, some heedlessly broke them. Consequently student council was placed in a bad light, because it had guaranteed, and had believed in the students sufficiently, when it made the petition, that the rules would be lived up to. However, now that this event is passed, let us make it a point to get back of the council in all that it does. Through its action it has obtained for the students several very nice vacation periods. It is up to the students to see that all rules governing these occasions are obeyed. Without the council's consent, the free periods would not have been obtained. Students get back of the council and give it your hearty support.

TRAFFIC CONDITIONS

Because of the great number of out-of-town visitors and friends with machines that have been at Penn State this year on special occasions like the Alumni Home-Coming week-end and the more recent Pennsylvania Day celebration, the COLLEGIAN deems it advisable to suggest that some regulations be made for a more proficient accommodation of these people and their cars, as far as traffic is concerned. Allen Street, leading into and through the campus was the scene of a steady stream of cars coming in both directions and many were parked on this drive on the campus. Would it not be advisable on such occasions to make Allen Street a one-way street, making it only an entrance to the campus and allowing traffic to proceed only north on that street. Cars coming from New Beaver or the other portions of the campus could return to the town proper by McAllister street, making it also a one-way street, traffic going south.

BRYAN LECTURE

This evening Penn State students will have the opportunity of hearing one of the foremost speakers in America, William Jennings Bryan, a man of great mental abilities, strong principles and staunch in what he believes to be best for all. Mr. Bryan's endeavors during the last twenty years have been the cause of many great topics of national interest. His activity in the campaign for prohibition was but one example of the many works he has undertaken to make this country a better one for its people. The Phi Kappa Phi has done a big thing in obtaining this great orator for an evening in State College and any man of woman who fails to attend this lecture will have thrown away a rare opportunity. The COLLEGIAN trusts that as many will attend as can possibly do so. The very smallness of the admission fee will make it doubly possible for those to attend who could not do so were the lecture to take place in some large city.

"WRITING OF BOOKS" - DR. WOLF'S THEME

Former Missionary Holds View That Each Person is Daily Making a Record in the "Book of Life."

"The Writing of Books" was the interesting subject discussed by Dr. L. B. Wolf, college preacher for Pennsylvania Div. Sunday. Dr. Wolf is at present the General Secretary and Treasurer of the Board of Foreign Missions of the General Assembly of the Lutheran Church. He has served approximately twenty-four years as a missionary in India, and has also written books of interest to the general mind of the Lutheran Church. He has had many experiences and so he spoke from the standpoint of one who has learned something of which he wished to tell others.

His subject, "The Writing of Books" was concerned chiefly with our true record as seen by God. A person may seem good to his fellow beings, but nothing is hidden from above. The writings which one makes in his own book of life can not be changed and the inscriptions are a way's true. What life as a missionary and writer, he has had many experiences and so he spoke from the standpoint of one who has learned something of which he wished to tell others.

Every body is writing a book that contains every thought he ever made. This is not written on paper by the pen, but in the mind. He may not even write, but nevertheless this record is being written. Each person is a tremendous author of every impulse and motive that emanates from his mind. The most secret thoughts are indelibly written in this record of life, and a person hardly ever stops to think what sort of a book he is writing. In his own mind, he is writing a record. He is not writing a record, but he is writing a record. He is not writing a record, but he is writing a record. He is not writing a record, but he is writing a record.

A person is responsible only to himself for everything that goes into his book. Parents and grandparents are not to be blamed, but they are not responsible. God made man a self-determining being who is responsible only to himself. In a court the defendant often says with heavy eyes, "I am innocent. I did not want to do this." But this is not the question. It is, "did he do it or not?" In life a person can say, "I will not do this against God," and thus gain will power and make their own book better.

It does not pay to write a double record, for it cannot be hidden and will be found out. A person should not deceive himself into believing that he can write a double record successfully. A distinguished banker in one of the large cities gained a good reputation. One day, however, he disappeared and was never found. On the surface of life, he had written a fine record, but above, his record differed. He had been writing a double record. Another man was honored in his city for many years and had held many positions of responsibility. Today his house is empty. He also has disappeared. He too had been writing double and underneath his open record, was something different hidden. The question naturally arises, what do about this and most records. Some say that the best thing is to go and confess it. But this does not make up for the past and he like the story of a boy who had sneaked into a theatre many times without paying. Once he was stricken by conscience and wrote a letter to the proprietor asking forgiveness, confessing his dishonesty. The owner commented on the fact that although he would be forgiven, he did not enclose the money which was due. In the same way, a person is often eager to ask forgiveness but does not wish to pay for it. The only kind of records that amount to anything are those in which across each page is written the name of Christ, and His name is not written there unless His name is written deep in the heart of the every-day life of the person.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL BEARY REVIEWS CADET REGIMENT

Before a crowd that lined two sides of Holmes Field, Adjutant General F. D. Beary reviewed the cadet regiment here last Saturday morning in the annual Pennsylvania Day Review. At least 1100 students taking military drill took part in the affair and together with the cadet band made one of the most brilliant showings that has ever been witnessed at this institution. The awarding of the Distinguished Service Cross to a student was also a high light in the ceremony.

A few minutes after ten o'clock the regiment moved out from the Armory Field headed by the band. Once on Holmes Field, no time was lost in getting the ceremonies under way. The first event of the morning was the awarding of the Distinguished Service Cross to Charles Rafter, a student at Penn State enrolled in the Two Year Agricultural Course. Extraordinary heroism in assisting a wounded comrade to safety and then later taking charge of a company that had lost all of its officers were the reasons given for the awarding of the citation. Adjutant General Beary made the award.

Immediately following this part of the exercises the regiment passed in review before the adjutant-general and his staff. Although the majority of the men in the various battalions had been drilling less than two months nevertheless they made a showing that was a credit to the institution. Adjutant General Beary is reported to have been very favorably impressed with the way in which military activities are being carried on here and highly commended Colonel Combs for the work done during the short time he has been here.

COLLEGE INTERESTED IN GRAIN EXPLOSION

Mr. D. J. Price, Head of the Development Division, Bureau of Chemistry,

Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. was here last Monday to consult with Dean Sackett and Professor Kinze concerning industrial development work which the Department of Agriculture has recently placed in a new division of which Mr. Price is head. It is known that Mr. Price is here to confer with the members of the School of Engineering and the School of Mines in connection with a considerable series of experiments in the explosives of flour mill dusts in cooperation with the Bureau of Chemistry. Mr. Dadrlek was in charge of this work. A bulletin was published covering the experiments and the preventative measures which were approved looking toward the reduction of fires and explosions in flour mills and grain elevators. This new division has a large program and it is possible that the College will be called upon to assist the Department of Agriculture in carrying out its plan.

MINING EXTENSION WORK PROGRESSING

The School of Mines started its work in extension when Dean Moore visited many mining towns in the western part of Pennsylvania during the week end. The work of the School of Mines in extension will consist in furnishing lessons, appointing of instructors, and supervising work in the night schools teaching mining. W. G. Duncan, Associate Professor of Mining Extension has prepared a series of lessons which are being given in great demand among mining men.

Classes have already been organized in about thirteen towns in the western part of the state. Another group of classes will be organized during the next two weeks. Those places which are now organizing classes are Patton, Barnesboro, Hastings, Dudley, Robertsdale, Six Mile Run, Guilford, South Fork, Parsons, Rockwood, Brownville, and Royce. At Johnstown arrangements were made for cooperation between State College and the school board in conducting classes in mining. It is also the intention of the School of Mines to establish classes in the metallurgical plants throughout the state to further carry out the work of the Extension Department.

LOCAL MEN ALUMNI OF MASS. AG. GET-TO-GETHER

Eight members of the Penn State faculty, alumni of the Massachusetts Agricultural College commemorated the fiftieth anniversary of their Alma Mater at a dinner held in the University Club last Friday evening. Thirty-nine men got-togethers were held all over the United States on that evening for the purpose of arousing interest in the Semi-Centennial celebration at Amherst, Mass., next June, when the Alumni Memorial Building will be dedicated. The Penn State faculty members present at the dinner were Dr. S. W. Fletcher, Dr. J. P. Adams, Professors, E. J. White, H. P. Pierce, F. G. Merkle, and D. S. Cobb.

MANY VISITORS VIEW "AG HILL" EXHIBIT

Liebig Chemical Society Awarded Cup for Most Educational and Complete Showing.

Following a custom established some years ago to hold an "Agricultural Exhibit" for the benefit of the Pennsylvania Day visitors, the various departments on "AG Hill" staged one of the largest and most complete exhibits in the history of the college.

The "Ag Chem" exhibit was by far the most educational and complete. There were few details of the work which were not touched upon. Especial attention was paid to the work of food chemistry.

The Horticulture department had an exhibit which was not only varied but also of the highest quality. The fruit and vegetable exhibit was complete and the display on show made one's mouth water for a bite.

A small menagerie was the unusual feature of the Forestry exhibit and consisted of several snakes, a porcupine and a ground hog.

The Astronomers had a variety of work in their branch of the show. Farm machinery and tractor accessories were featured and the fertilizer work of the college was outlined in detail.

Several thousand people visited this show and it proved to be one of the best features of the morning.

Yes, we're in the same boat as you. The big time is over and now the old job of pounding the keys (typewriter—not piano) is with us again.

Consequently we wish to intercede again our old friend, Mr. Phil-Up-Space whom the Ed called on to fill the breach (not of promise) which the laxness of the last week-end has been the cause of.

Well, it sure was a great week end, wasn't it?

Yes it were, we answered, but she went home too soon.

Anyhow, the Collin Diggers Union wasn't on strike, at least so some of the boys think. But wasn't it pitiful how some of them looked after it was all over.

But, oh boy, we can never forget how it was when we first saw them. From the minute they arrived until we had to let them go, we were excited.

And then the way the old Lion let

While sweet in our memory lingers the thoughts, starting us in the face is the big problem of getting "Dad" to send a check big enough to cover the face of the Old Main clock.

And we still have that three night bill to pay the landlady with one and a half per night and ten follows in the room. That's the only place where it hurts.
